2	I was hoping for more details regarding the inner workings of the SRD. The presentation was a reading of the Regs. and Act. This would be a suitable presentation for someone that was not an OLS and required an explanation of self governance.	7/25/2018 3:42 PM
3	Yes, but Tom was obviously reading from a script. Try looking at the camera occasionally.	7/25/2018 3:21 PM
4	I was expecting a presentation on some of the challenges that the Survey Review Department has had during the course of some of the reviews that had been done.	7/25/2018 3:05 PM
5	It gave a complete overview of the Acts, Regs. & the role of the S.R.D.	7/25/2018 2:51 PM
6	very good review and update	7/25/2018 2:37 PM

2	The section on making the SRD review a learning experience for members of the field and office staff is a good idea, but coordination of such a session would be challenging depending on the timing of the office review.	7/25/2018 3:05 PM

6	Although there were few questions from the audience, there seems to be a need for another Party Chief Seminar. I/we would like to suggest that if another Party Chief Seminar is being contemplated, then a key component of that Seminar (or maybe one done on it's own) should deal with field notes. Prior to the electronic collection of data associated with the field work, the Party Chief and crew were responsible for the recording of clear and proper field notes, which would have been done clearly enough to stand on their own, without the need for any explanation. They would illustrate all of the evidence found during the course of the survey, and also illustrate the methodology that was used in the decision making process. Quite often the Courts would have viewed the field notes as the best evidence of the survey, in support of the final decisions that were shown on the final Plan. Nowadays, the field notes associated with the survey consists of electronic data that was collected during the course of the survey, which do not on their own give any indication of either the methodology or decision making that went into the final results.	7/25/2018 3:05 PM
