

resumed his trade. About 1838 he went to Montreal, where he was engaged on the Harbour Commission, and he remained there for 46 years, until his death. He had finally worked up to be Mechanical Superintendent. He was one of the first and oldest of the Quebec Harbour Commissioners.

It is not known if the subject of this sketch was married twice. But his wife was Annie Gregg. In 1888 she published a book, entitled:—"A Romance of Toronto (founded on fact)", and signed it "Annie Savigny".

Hugh Paine Savigny made the following surveys:—

Survey of a tract of land between Tosorontio and Sunnyside, June 15th, 1852.

Survey residue of the town plot of Penetanguishene, May 31st, 1855.

Survey block of land south of Lake Nipissing, January 9th, 1858.

Survey south of Lake Nipissing, October 27th, 1858.

The most of the data for this biography was obtained from Mr. W. R. Savigny, of Merriton. The photo from an aunt of the latter in Niagara Falls, N.Y. Some of the data from Mrs. Savigny in Toronto, and some from a Mrs. Savigny in Peterboro, Ont.

THOMAS CHISHOLM LIVINGSTON

Correction and Addition to the Biography Which Appeared in the 1934 Report

Of Scottish ancestry, the son of William Livingston, and his wife, Elizabeth Chisholm, Thomas Chisholm was born in the "Scotch Block" of the Township of Esquesing in the County of Halton in Ontario, on July 2nd, 1836. He was one of a family of eleven of whom five, besides himself, pioneered in Manitoba or the adjoining territory.

The eldest of his four brothers moved to the State of Michigan and died there. Peter Stratton, graduated from Queen's University and entered the Presbyterian Ministry. He married Elizabeth Fowler, a niece of Dean Fowler of Queen's, and was for several years at Broadview, and died in Brandon Hospital years ago. Another brother, William Guy, pioneered at Carman, Man., homesteading the site on which the town now stands. He later moved to Treherne, and still later to Glenboro, at which points he engaged in business as a general merchant, subsequently retiring to Winnipeg, where he died during the war. Two of his sisters live in Kenora, Ont., the elder being the wife of Dr. W. J. Gunne, C.P.R. Surgeon. The youngest brother, Archibald Malcolm, a Veterinary Surgeon and farmer, was one of the early settlers at Melita.

Jane, the eldest sister, became a Mrs. Fletcher. Elizabeth and Isobel married brothers, Angus and William McQueen. Angus died in California during the gold rush, and his widow moved to Winnipeg, where she taught in one of the early schools. Elizabeth's son, Dr. Duncan McQueen, practised in Winnipeg for a number of years. Catharine married D. L. Clink, at one time resident of Winnipeg and for some time before and during the Rebellion of 1885 was farming instructor on Indian Reserves in the Battleford District. Another sister, Ellen, became Mrs. John Kennedy and moved to the States, and Joan married one, John Livingston (no relation).

Thomas Chisholm, the subject of this sketch, was apprenticed to Henry Winter of Milton, Ont., on April 9th, 1856, and he qualified as a Land Surveyor on January 19th, 1859.

He resided in Winnipeg for a number of years in the ninth and tenth decades, where he represented the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, for which he built up a large and remunerative agency. After leaving Winnipeg he lived for a time in British Columbia, but later returned to Milton, Ont., where he died on November 5th, 1913, and is buried in Hamilton Cemetery.

Where your Chairman said he had met T. C. Livingston in Manitoba, the party he met was not Thomas Chisholm, but Alexander Livingstone, an engineer then in the employ of the Manitoba Government. The circumstances of this misdirection not being of sufficient importance to explain.

This correction and addition has been kindly given me by Mr. J. Lonsdale Doupe, M.L.S., Winnipeg.
