

Lloyd Nelson Myers, N.B.L.S., O.L.S., C.L.S., U.E.
May 5, 1922 - March 28, 2002

"It was with sadness that the children of the late Lloyd Myers of Vineland, Ontario, formerly of Sussex, NB, announced his sudden passing on March 28, 2002" as quoted in the obituary to Lloyd Nelson Myers.

His five children, their spouses, his many grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren bear witness to his importance of family in the life of a man.

Lloyd Nelson Myers graduated from the University of New Brunswick (Class 1943) with a B.Sc. in Forest Engineering. Lloyd proceeded to serve his country in World War II as a Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Engineers and Canadian Army Pacific Force.

In 1947, he received his commission as N.B.L.S. followed in 1953 by obtaining his commission as an O.L.S. The same year he entered private practice in St. Catharines, Ontario. Over the next 23 years, Lloyd's career in Land Surveying was rewarding and challenging as he applied his expertise throughout the Niagara Peninsula and occasionally beyond.

Lloyd retired from active practice in 1976, but restless for an opportunity to continue to survey, he received his commission as a C.L.S. in 1982. This now permitted him to see the great land which he loved, as he surveyed the northern reaches of Canada.

Lloyd was proud of his ancestral roots and home in New Brunswick, after diligent research he was accepted as a member of U.E.L. in 2001.

Lloyd went home to Sussex, New Brunswick on the day that would have been his 80th birthday, May 5, 2002. In keeping with the passage quoted in the poem, "Breathes There The Man" as penned by Sir Walter Scott, he returned to his native land.
